Acceptable College Classes Accommodations

Technical colleges and high schools both have independent legal obligations to students with disabilities. This means allowable accommodations can look different between high school and college.

Start College Now courses are college classes; the following information should be considered for students requiring accommodations.

- College disability services staff do not provide the same services or perform the same functions as a high school special education teacher, case manager, or transition specialist.
- It is possible that accommodations available to the student in the high school setting will not be allowable in college.
- Specifically, accommodations should not fundamentally alter the essential components of the course.
- The student's IEP team should help decide which accommodations are necessary to be successful in a Start College Now Program.

Commonly Approved at a College Level	May Not be Appropriate at College Level
Additional time on tests	Change in licensing or certification requirements
Reduced distraction testing environment	Modified attendance in certain programs
Access to additional technology (smart pens, iPads, alternative textbooks)	Change in contents of an exam, unlimited time, or reduced possible answers
Tests read aloud by software	Personal care attendants
Peer note takers	Modified curriculum or course expectations
Preferential seating in the classroom	Extension of deadlines for assignments
Screen readers and audio textbooks

For questions regarding Start College Now accommodations, please contact the Northwood Tech Accommodations Specialist, Heidi Diesterhaft at Heidi.Diesterhaft@NorthwoodTech.edu.
